Recollections of Early School Days.

By F. G. Geist.

The morning of the last school day, Nov.,
When we said bye to our teacher,
and started Walker's speed-boat,
and headed over Waikiki's reef;

And took jack-knives now and then
When we escaped in play,
and got one packet safely wrapped—

How often I do say—

The running of the rosaries green,
All every time and week,
and how in early hours of sun—

We passed in the boat;

When we were in school,

The teacher's name was—

How much of it is passing by—

Look of his hat and bowed—

The running of the rosaries green,

And every time and week,

and how in early hours of sun—

We passed in the boat;

When we were in school,

The teacher's name was—

How much of it is passing by—

Look of his hat and bowed—

The running of the rosaries green,

And every time and week,

and how in early hours of sun—

We passed in the boat;

When we were in school,

The teacher's name was—

How much of it is passing by—
